HICtionary:

Landless: A person or group living without equitable access to, and use of rural or urban land with secure tenure as needed to fulfill one or more human needs and/or human rights due to any single, or combination of means and factors, including but not limited to:

- Discrimination;
- Dispossession;
- Displacement, including forced eviction;
- Denial (of use, access, etc.);
- Scarcity of land;
- Insufficient capability;
- Damage or destruction of land and/or means of access.

A person or community is landless by virtue of being subject to landlessness due to any single or combination of above means and factors.

Landless persons or groups may be variously characterized as:

- “Victims” (of crime or abuse of power and entitled to reparation),
- Affected (whether the perpetrator(s)/duty holder(s) known or not),
- Vulnerable (subject to policy priority and/or temporary special measures),
- Potential producers on land,
- Agents of remedy.

(See Landlessness below)

Landlessness may result from causes involving:

- Political tyranny, social injustice;
- Conflict, occupation, war and colonization;
- Natural disasters and climate change;
- Failed land laws and policies;
- Corruption and fraud;
- Land grabbing;
- Insufficient lands for suitable use;
- Poverty and debt;
- Forcible displacement/population transfer;
- Corporate exploitation;
- State acquisition/public purpose;
- Temporary measures prolonged;
- Refugees crisis;
- Land degradation.
A landless person or group may need land for:

- Cultivation and plantation;
- Dwelling and cultivation;
- Residence only;
- Other forms of livelihood, including investment and trade.
- Access to, and use of land as a natural resource (e.g., for grazing or recreation).

Landlessness: is the condition of being without equitable access to, and use of rural or urban land with secure tenure as needed to fulfill one or more human needs and/or human rights. (See Landless above.)

UN Human Rights Council’s Advisory Committee

The Advisory Committee’s final study defined the rights-holders addressed by the Declaration as “peasants and other people working in rural areas,” understood to include smallholder farmers, landless people working as tenant farmers or agricultural labourers, people living from traditional fishing, hunting and herding activities, and rural women. The Committee excluded “the rights of other people working in rural areas, such as those working in the business, industry or public administration.”

The Human Rights Council confirmed this definition when it created the working group to negotiate a “UN Declaration on the rights of peasants and other people working in rural areas” in September 2013.

The Advisory Committee’s study reports that approximately 20% of the world’s hungry are landless. “Most work as tenant farmers or agricultural labourers. Tenant farmers usually have to pay high rents and have little security of possession from season to season. Agricultural labourers usually work for extremely low wages that are insufficient to feed their families, and often have to migrate from one insecure, informal job to another.”

According to the Advisory Committee, “The term peasant also applies to the landless.”

Food and Agriculture Organisation

The following categories of people are considered to be landless and are likely to face difficulties in ensuring their livelihood:

(a) Agricultural labour households with little or no land;
(b) Non-agricultural households in rural areas, with little or no land, whose members are engaged in various activities such as fishing, making crafts for the local market, or providing services;
(c) Other rural households of pastoralists, nomads, peasants practising shifting cultivation, hunters and gatherers, and people with similar livelihoods.

“Landless. To the modern world it describes a social category. To the ancient Tlingit it described a spiritual disability. The Tlingit believed all things were imbued with a spirit that existed interdependently with the spirits of all other things....To be landless meant to be cut off from this spiritual relationship with the land, in essence to be spiritually destitute.”

Longman Dictionary of Contemporary English:

land•less /ˈlændləs/ adjective
owning no land

Longman Business Dictionary:

landless land•less /ˈlændləs/ adjective not owning land
The Nicaraguan government redistributed more land to previously landless peasants.

Macmillan Dictionary: landless people are poor and do not own any land
Synonyms and related words: Poor: brassic, the poor, impoverished

Quora blog:

Monoj Narzari, studied at Assam Agricultural University: “In India farmers having less than one acre land is known as landless farmers.”

Sampathkumar D G, B.Sc Agri from University of Agricultural Sciences, GKV, Bangalore (2015): “The farmers who do not have tenancy rights over the piece of land but only practice the cultivation activities and get some part of the final output as a return for their efforts put on in the agricultural production activity are called landless farmers”

The Free Dictionary:

land-less (länd′lĭs)
adj. Owning or having no land.

land′less·ness n.

land•less (ˈlænd ləs)
adj. without landed property.

Wiktionary:

Landless
Etymology: From Middle English londlees, from Old English landlēas, equivalent to land + -less. Cognate with Dutch landeloos (“landless”), German landlos (“landless”), Icelandic landlaus (“landless”).

Adjective (not comparable)
1. Not owning land.
   The landless younger sons of the gentry often entered the military as the only way to make a living.

   The landless flock to the cities seeking jobs.
2. Not containing any land.
   We set sail toward the landless horizon.

Antonyms: landed
Derived terms: landlessness
Translations: not owning land

Landlessness
Etymology: landless + -ness
Noun: landlessness (uncountable)
   1. The state or condition of being landless.

Human Rights and Humanitarian Law Framework

Internationally codified human rights affected by landlessness may include:

- Life,
- Decent work,
- Livelihood,
- Adequate housing,
- Food,
- Family,
- Social security,
- Highest attainable standard of mental and physical health,
- Freedom of movement,
- Water,
- Property,
- Freedom from discrimination,
- Gender equality,
- Fair trial/rule of law,
- Self-determination.
International humanitarian law provisions and prohibitions include:

- Evacuations only temporary (Hague, §§42–56; Geneva IV, §§27–34, 47–78)
- Prohibited: discrimination, exploitation, causing loss or depletion of, or endangering natural resources in the occupied territory (e.g., Palestine, Western Sahara, Cyprus) (Hague, §§55; Geneva IV, §55)
- Altering legal system in occupied territory prohibited (Hague, §43)
- Population transfer criminalized (Rome, §§7, 8)

Populations of landless people and landless movements:

Global: It is estimated that 50% of the world’s hungry are small-holder farmers, 20% landless families who survive as tenant farmers or poorly paid agricultural labourers who often have to migrate from one insecure, informal job to another, and 10% herders, pastoralists or fisherfolk.

Algeria: “The poorest in Algeria are the landless farmers who live in the mountainous regions to the north or near the south Saharan region. Working on the production of crops, and unable to procure their own land, they have been particularly affected by soil erosion and degradation, droughts, poor irrigation, and drainage.” (Farahnaz Mohammed, “Poverty in Algeria,” 2 July 2013.)

In 1873, the French colonial authorities carried out a land census on the territories of 402 tribes (about half at the time), finding 2% of them landless. (Mahfoud Bennoune, The Making of Contemporary Algeria, 1830-1987 (Cambridge University Press, 2002), p. 24.)

Bangladesh: of more than 160 million inhabitants, close to 4.5 million are completely landless, mostly in rural areas, according to a 2008 Bangladesh Bureau of Statistics survey; according to Unnayan Onneshan think-tank, on average, 39 million people in Bangladesh are displaced by each major flood, with three million more displaced by each cyclone. (“Landless numbers on the rise,” IRIN News, 8 June 2010);

“...more than two thirds of rural people are now landless (owning less than 0.2 hectares)10 and landlessness is increasing rapidly owing to demography and inheritance laws that divide holdings into ever smaller plots, but also to land-grabbing by powerful people.”11

Brazil: Landless Workers’ Movement (MST) of Brazil is the hemisphere’s largest social movement organization, claiming 1.5 million members.

Cyprus:

Hawaii: Native Hawaiians were a landless and dying people when Congress passed the Hawaiian Homes Commission Act in 1920...Al Jazeera;

India: finance minister Arun Jaitley said 300 million people do not own land, while launching the government’s Mudra refinancing scheme for micro enterprises. His office didn’t reply to queries on the source of the number despite repeated calls and emails.

“The current estimate for India’s landless is around 100 million households, which would constitute at least 300 million of our population,” Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP) spokesman M.J. Akbar wrote in his column in the Times of India on 5 April. Roshan Kishore, “How many Indians are landless?” Live mint (4 May 2015);

"The number of landless agricultural workers in India as per Census 2001 was 10.67 crore and as per Census 2011 it was 14.43 crore," according to Labour Minister Bandaru Dattatreya (“Number of landless agricultural labourers in India rises to 14.43 crore” [144.3 million], The Economic Times (11 May 2015).

Indonesia: The last census in 1993 showed that 5,989,534 peasant households in Indonesia, or 28% of the total, owned between zero and 0.1 hectares of land. The economic crisis will have increased that figure as unemployed people return to the land from the city. Many of them had migrated to the city in the first place because there was no more land.

A similar number, 6,315,091 households or 29% of the total, had between 0.1 and 0.49 hectares. If we consider half a hectare as adequate for small agricultural production we can see that 57% of rural households in Indonesia do not have enough land. This is a minimal figure, because it does not count all those who have been permanently removed from the land but who still want to return there. Dianto Bachriadi, “Land for the landless,” Inside Indonesia (30 July 2007), at: http://www.insideindonesia.org/land-for-the-landless.

Iraq: 3,300,000 displaced

“After Iraq gained independence in 1932, successive governments attempted to "Arabize" Mosul and other areas of northern Iraq, by forcibly displacing hundreds of thousands of ethnic Kurds, Turkmens and Assyrians, and encouraging landless Arabs from central and southern Iraq to resettle there.”

Iraqi landless persons in exile: “Our food has become dependent on a hidden army of illegal workers, both foreign and British.” (Felicity Lawrence, “The new landless labourers,” The Guardian, 17 May 2003.)

Kenya: “Fifty years after independence, there are thousands of third generation squatters and landless people whose grandparents were dispossessed of their land by British colonialists to make room for settler farms.” Kipkirui Kap Telwa, “Government must settle all landless Kenyans,” Standard Digital (23 April 2011)).
“In Kenya, members of the Sengwer community who live in Embobut Forest, 400 kilometers from Nairobi, are facing eviction from their ancestral communal land. The government has deployed security forces to evict the group in an effort to preserve forest cover.

[Thomas] Chelimo, who was born and raised in the forest, as were his father and grandfather, says that the forced eviction by the government agency will render the community homeless and landless. Chelimo says his children and grandchildren ran away because of fear of eviction.” Lenny Ruvaga, “Kenyan Minority Group on Verge of Being Landless,” VOA (17 January 2018).

Kosovo: Roma, Ashkali and Egyptian (RAE) communities: “In April 2010, the prime minister of Kosovo, Hashim Thaçi, sent a letter to all municipal leaders requesting that they allocate land for landless displaced families (OSCE, May 2011), but little action has been taken.” (IDMC and NRC, “KOSOVO: Durable solutions still elusive 13 years after conflict,” A profile of the internal displacement situation (10 October 2012), p. 17).

“...we have more than 300,000 families in the country who are absolutely landless. In addition, we have about 670 households that are suffering because of the problem of inadequate land.” Mr. Wamwere in “Motions: Preference to Landless Groups in Sale of Land,” Kenya National Assembly Official Record (Hansard) Dec 4, 1979 - Jun 18, 1980, 28th of May, pp. 1310–1337, at p. 1312.

Libya: 543,844 displaced, 75,000 properties subject to restitution prior to 2011

Morocco: les femmes soulalyates et guichiates

Namibia: those removed from ancestral lands

“Just who are the Landless People’s Movement?” New Era (17 February 2017)
“Landless Peoples Movement,” Namibia Broadcasting Corporation

Nepal: Some 1.3 million households are landless or land-poor (UN Nepal Information Platform).

Palestine: 7,555,000 in exile, 5.5 million registered refugees, 250,000 internally displaced, 36.6% of West Bank land dispossessed by colonists, 2,159,622 ha subject to restitution.

“Landlessness among Palestinians as a facet of colonial policy in Mandate Palestine before the 1936 revolt. The growth of what was sometimes called a ‘landless class’ came into official view after the violence of 1929. Subsequent investigations indicated that landlessness was a significant problem and that it threatened to destabilize the Mandate. The effort to ameliorate the crisis of landlessness, however, clashed with the dominant colonial conception of settler developmentalism, the notion that Jews, not Arabs, were the agents of modern economic development in Palestine.” (Charles Anderson, “The British Mandate and the crisis of Palestinian landlessness, 1929–1936,” Middle Eastern Studies, Vol. 54, Issue 2 (2017), 171–215.)

Sri Lanka: “Yahapalana is going to turn Sri Lankans to landless citizens like Hawaii” Shenali D Waduge

Sudan: 3,300,000 displaced

Syria: 6.6 million internally displaced, five million refugees

United States:
Western Sahara: 165,000 refugees, 21,280,000 ha subject to restitution

Yemen: three million displaced

Zimbabwe: over 500,000 landless people who have applied to the Ministry of Lands and Rural Resettlement to be allocated pieces of arable land (Elita Chikwati and Alec Mubani. “Landless waiting list tops 500,000,” The Herald (8 April 2018).

Typology of landlessness:

Rural:
Farmers who work for landlords and get payment by them;
People subject to land expropriation in favor of local, regional and/or global companies;
People subject to institutionalized, material discrimination in their own country

Urban:

Landless Moroccans (documentary film)

Conflict, occupation and war context:

1. People subject to land dispossession, denial of access to land, displacement, colonization, institutionalized material discrimination, ethnic cleansing and population transfer, in general: indigenous Palestinian people as citizens of Israel, refugees, residents of the Israeli-occupied territory of Palestine; indigenous Ahwazi Arabs subject to colonization and dispossession of their private, collective and public lands; indigenous Kurds in the states in which they live; indigenous urban and rural Uighurs subject to Chinese occupation; indigenous urban and rural Tibetans subject to Chinese occupation; Sahrawi refugees and dispossessed persons under Moroccan occupation;
2. Settled populations in Darfur, Nuba Mountains and South Sudan dispossessed and unable to access their lands as a result of conflict;
3. People dispossessed and/or displaced due to their religious or ethnic minority status in the areas controlled by Islamic State and other insurgent groups;
4. Sectarian conflict in Yemen and Iraq as a function of external forces conducting proxy warfare;
5. Ethnic cleansing/genocide carried out by Myanmar military against Rohingya and Kachin minorities;
6. Indigenous Cypriots on both sides of the partition and population transfer of 1974 who have lost lands as a result of the 1974 Turkish invasion, 1963 conflict, or other phase of communal conflict;
